

SKRIPAL TWITTER ROUNDUP

30.03.18

Chris Heron

- Continued Russian disinformation, doubts and conspiracy theories by the usual people, and newly created accounts, in Europe too
- Suggested measures against Putin
- Putin's rotten Russia

CityBoy @Aikonsteve

Moscow: UK Hiding Info on Skripal Case Hints at Likely Intel Involvement

<http://bit.ly/2JaSka8>

<https://twitter.com/Aikonsteve/status/980031333199241217>

JC   #FBPE @jclanoe

Interesting that in #Skripal investigation, nothing has been said about mobile phones geolocalisation using triangulation of both him and daughter or others.. indeed spooks never use a phone. Proof he was still active but working for London?

Adam S @EngAdam9

if Russia had wanted to kill Skripal, he could have had been poisoned/killed in prison between 2006 and 2010. It looks like a Mafia thing to me! (user joined Twitter March 2018)

Ernst v. All

@ErnstvAll

Die Logik im Fall #Skripal (Cartoon Schwarwel)

<https://twitter.com/ErnstvAll/status/980031072489656320>

Tore @potifar66

Police went in and out of #Skripal door for 3 weeks, before they found the "nerve agent" - at the door. That's really interesting . Any questions?

<https://twitter.com/potifar66/status/979521884856471552>

Dan Kaszeta @DanKaszeta

It's non volatile. It doesn't leap across space or defy physics. That cop would be fine as long as they don't touch it. It's not a gas.

World's deadliest
nerve-agent

Look mum no protective clothing!

World's deadliest
nerve-agent

Gracie Stable-Genius #PCPEU @GracieSamuels

"Yulia Skripal" So is #Novichok the most potent and deadly nerve agent in the world - or what?

<https://twitter.com/DanKaszeta/status/979994119060770816>

Dan Kaszeta @DanKaszeta

If you don't think people can survive nerve agent exposure, you are under-educated on the topic. Read up a bit.

<https://twitter.com/DanKaszeta/status/979993397388808192>

Suggested measures against Putin

Garry Kasparov@Kasparov63

Seeing these sentiments everywhere now about going after Putin's money to deter his aggression. Great, but it makes the date on these pieces I wrote after he invaded Crimea more painful. washingtonpost.com/opinions/garry.....

Western leaders would be wise to follow the money: Sanction the elites who support Putin, go after the family members they use to hide their assets abroad and scrutinize their companies. If existing laws are inadequate to deal with billionaire thugs who enable a dangerous regime, write new ones. And do all this quickly, because the price to remove Putin goes up with every delay. Eventually, that price will be paid not just in the cash Western countries are afraid to lose but also in human lives.

Garry Kasparov
“It’s Time to Stop Putin”
The Washington Post — Mar 20, 2014

Putin's rotten Russia

Ilya Lozovsky@ichbinilya

Russian journalist Yevgeniy Levkovich has written a short post about Igor Vostrikov, the man from Kemerovo who lost his entire family in the shopping center fire. In a matter of days, Vostrikov has flipped from blaming the regime to blaming the opposition. My translation:

Watch the story of Igor Vostrikov from Kemerovo. Watch it carefully. Not because he lost his entire family in one moment — there are many such tragedies. Even I've seen a dozen of them in my time. But because this is the story of Russia itself. This is Russia. From love to hate — and back. From sin to remorse — and back. From fear to bravery — and back. And so on, in a circle.

Watch all the changes. Don't miss anything. From "the regime is guilty" to "provocateurs want to exploit this tragedy." From rage to servility. And again to rage. And again to servility. An endless closed circle. A rotisserie. A centrifuge. A washing machine.

Watch how he's being used. How he is afraid, and then stands up, and then is afraid again. How he, a simple guy from Kemerovo, has come face-to-face with reality. With a reality so terrible that, he of course, will return. To non-existence, where he was before.

Watch — and learn from this example. This is horrific, but it's also a big stroke of luck, to have such an example in front of your own eyes — and that it's not yours. (God forbid.)

But learn. Learn this lesson, or you, too, will be fried and laundered.

Don't blame, but don't flatter yourself. Don't expect either insight or betrayal. Just learn from the example of a simple Russian man, whose name is legion.

"The history of Russia is the struggle between ignorance and injustice." Zhvanetsky said that. And Zhvanetsky is a genius. Nothing more accurate has been said, either about Igor Vostrikov, or about ourselves.

But break this circle, at least in yourselves.

<https://twitter.com/ichbinilya/status/979703534722613250>

Business Ukraine mag @Biz_Ukraine_Mag

The Vory: New book by @MarkGaleotti the explores the history of the Russian mafia and the prominent role it plays in Putin's hybrid war against the West

<http://bit.ly/2IeU2px>

https://twitter.com/Biz\_Ukraine\_Mag/status/979770184566300672